

Why John L. Scott?

Two things have always been important to Kim Emmons: owning a business of her own and being involved in her community. When she decided to open her own office in Maple Valley, Washington, John L. Scott's commitment to the community made it a perfect partner for her.

"I have always admired John L. Scott because it cares for the community that it does business in," says Emmons.

"It is very easy for a company to just say that it is altruistic, but John L. Scott really practices what it preaches. John L. Scott's motto of living life with purpose and passion really holds true for me, and it speaks volumes of the company and the values that it holds."

"We are in the real estate business, and John L. Scott's mission has always been to build community."

Making a Difference

Emmons' dedication to the community is evident in many ways. She and her agents volunteer at local festivals, they sponsor fundraisers, and they attend city council meetings.

This connection with the community is a win-win situation, says Emmons. It wouldn't mean much to sell a home but not feel a connection to the communities where we live, work and play in. It is important to give back, to nurture and to nourish."

John L. Scott Foundation

In addition to supporting the community, Emmons and her office are also involved with the John L. Scott Foundation which sponsors events that raise money for children's healthcare facilities throughout the Pacific Northwest. The funds help cover uncompensated care, ensuring that every child receives medical care, regardless of their family's ability to pay.
